Shocking Death from Burns. About half-past seven o'clock on Monday evening tertha Anspacher, a little girl who lived with her mother at No. 553 Fifth street, was in the back parlor undress-ing her younger sister for bed. At the time Bertha held in her hand a kerosene oil lamp, which became par-tially extinguished, and in shaking the lamp it fell from taily extinguished, and in shaking the lamp it fell from her hand to the floor. The fluid instantly ignited and spread itself all over her person. In a moment her clothes were completely enveloped in flames, and, ereaming for help, the burning girl ran down the basement stairs, followed by Mrs. Anspacher, who enveloped her in a woollen shawl. The frantic child broke away from her mother and threw herself on the floor, when some neighbors, who heard her cries for help, ran into the house and extinguished the flames. Dr. McCartin was called, and in removing the clothing of his patient the flesh adhered to it. Her whole body, except that portion covered by her stocking and shoes, was terribly burned. She was also burned internally by inhaling the flame. The proper remedies were applied and everything done to relieve her sufferings, but she did not raily from the first shock, and death ensued shortly before three o'clock yesterday morning. Coroner Gover was yesterday called to hold an inquest, and the jury rendered a verdict of accidental death. Deceased was twelve years of age and a native of Virginia.

MEXICO.

Startling Expose of the Claims of France Against Mexico.

Financial Condition of Mexico Under the Republic and Under Maximilian.

The Foreign Debt Under the Republic $81,000,000---Under Maximilian $270,000,000.

Amount of French Claims $190,000,000.

Annual Expenditure of the Republic $12,000 .-000---Of the Empire $49,000,000.

Confiscation of an American Vessel by the Imperialist Authorities at Sisal. &c.

The following tables, compiled from information recently received from official sources, present the finan-cial condition of Mexico as it was in 1862, at the comencement of the French intervention, and as it would be under the indebtedness already incurred by Maximi ian should his attempted throne be maintained by charged Mexico for the expenses of invasion of her territory and other acts of intervention up to July 1, 1864, the sum of fifty millions of dollars. Of this sum ten millions have been paid out of alona subsequently made, and the remainder (forty millions) has been funded as a claim due by Mexico to the French government itself. Second, that besides the above forty millions loans have been negotiated for Maximilian in France to the amount of more than one hundred and fifty millions of Mexican people as a legitimate debt, although every dol-lar realized therefrom has been used not for the welfare or benefit of Mexico, but to meet the expenses which have been incurred in this iniquitous attempt to over-throw republican institutions and establish a monarchy

Third, that while the claims of France against Mexico as admitted by the constitutional government before the intervention began, amounted to less than three millions of dollars, the claims of France, as now put forward under Maximilian, and recognized by him, amount to over one hundred and ninety-three millions of dollars. This is apart from what may still be added under General Forey's recent and very significant reminder on the part ce, that it may be necessary "to make further of France, that it may be necessary "to make further pecuniary outlays in Mexico."

Fourth, that while the entire foreign debt of Mexico before the French intervention commenced amounted to but a little over eighty millions of dollars, that debt, if Maximilian is allowed to succeed, will be increased, even it no further addition is made to it, to over two hundred and seventy millions of dollars.

Fith, that the annual expenses of Mexico under the republic were less than twelve millions of dollars, while under Faximilian they have already reached the same of forty-nine millions. Of this sum over ten millions pe annum is due for interest from Maximilian to France. The following is a comparative statement of the legitimate foreign debt of Mexico, as recognized by the nal government of the republic, with the annual expenditures as established by act of Congress, August 16, 1861, and the debt which the French intervention seeks to impose upon the country, and the an-nual expenditures under the so-called government of
